1. Introduction

The FSA Students and Financial Partners channels portals will bring together, in one simple, personalized Web site all the information and productivity tools relevant to FSA's customers, employees, and partners to make informed financial aid decisions and empower financial partners to assist students. The personalized "front door" will automatically identify and distribute content relevant to each user. The portals will be the glue that bonds all of FSA's web services together providing a uniform starting point for students and financial partners to access FSA.

The purpose of this document is to provide a detailed picture of the features, design and functionality of the FSA Portal's Students Channel. Some of the information covered in this document is common between both the Students and Financial Partners Channels. Thus, a reference may be made to both Channels in certain sections of the document.

There are two major types of pages discussed in this document. They are known as 'Struts' pages and 'Content' pages.

'Struts' pages are defined as pages that invoke activities directly or indirectly. Direct activities are essentially actions done when that page is called. Indirect activities are the predecessor to this action. For example a logon form is a predecessor to the actual logon activity and requires form data collection for the activity to work.

'Content' pages are essentially static pages. This means that the content is not dynamic. However, there is one exception to this. Since both portals will support internationalization these pages can dynamically change to another language. As a result 'static', in the case here, means that the page is meant to always look similar (varies because of text lengths in different languages) and have the same text.

Both types of pages in this document show detailed information for each page and vary based upon the type of page and their respective functionality. However, there are some common details that almost all pages will have. All of the different attributes (and a brief definition) for files outlined in this document are described below. This will help clarify what these items mean and how they relate to the design.

This document was created to assist the development team as they create the portals. Beyond the introduction to this document, there are four additional sections, each of which is an in-depth guide to aid the developers in creating specific elements of the site.

Section Two, Principles, is the design methodology. Divided into four subsections, 'Principles' addresses the topics of Usability, Section 508 compliance, Internationalization and Content Management.

Usability: This section describes nine factors that have been isolated as keys to improving the browsing experience for the site users. The overall design of the portal as well as individual page elements have been constructed with these nine guidelines in mind.

Section 508: The need to serve the informational needs of all interested parties was also a guiding principle as the portal was developed. This section of the document establishes the developers' commitment to creating a site friendly to users of assistive technology, and the steps taken to achieve this goal.

Internationalization: This section of the document addresses how the Financial Partners portal will meet the needs of both its English-speaking and Spanish-speaking audiences. The development team will use a Struts application to create this functionality, and how this is done is described here.

Content Management: This section of the document describes the Content Management System that will be implemented. The development team will use Interwoven's TeamSite product as the Content Management tool.

Section Three, Appearance and Navigation, is a guide to the look and feel of the portal. There is a mock-up of the general site navigation, as well detailed information about the images, colors, and files used. This section documents the flow and projected design of each of the navigation components.

Content Pages, the fourth section in this document, lists each of the (more or less) "static" pages in the site. To guide the development, detailed mock-ups of each page have been included to demonstrate the projected layout of the content. Likewise, this section of the document lists the various links included on each page, and the actual text content that will be displayed. Everything the developer could possibly need to know, from URLs to the placement of specific content elements, is addressed herein.

The final section of this document, 'Struts', covers those pages invoke activities directly or indirectly. Like the 'Content' pages section, 'Struts' also includes detailed page mock-ups and textual content. However, this section includes additional information to guide the developer in integrating individual Struts elements (for example, the 'Registration' or 'Search' functionalities) into the portal.

2. Principles

2.1 Usability

The Usability Guidelines adopted in this design are as follows:

- Reduce User's Workload
- Be Consistent
- Limit Maximum Page Size
- Consider Page Length
- Consider Monitor Size and Screen Resolution
- Use Graphics Wisely
- Show Links Clearly
- Show Used Links

Reduce User's Workload - Automate as much of the site's function as possible. Eliminate the need for users to perform tasks like searching for FAFSA information, NSLDS, state aid information, etc.

Be Consistent - Present information and similar functions consistently throughout the site, including logos, page titles, headers, navigation elements, etc. Also use a consistent position on all pages for logos, recurring text, buttons, and graphics.

Limit Maximum Page Size – Establish a recommended maximum page size, in order to allow for an acceptable downloading time for users with a slow connection.

Consider Page Length - Use short pages for home pages and all navigation pages, pages that need to be quickly browsed and/or read online, and pages with very long graphics. Use long pages to simplify page maintenance (fewer Web page files to maintain), to match the structure of a paper counterpart, and to make pages more convenient to download and print.

Consider Monitor Size and Screen Resolution - Design for computers with 15-inch monitors with screen resolutions of 800 x 600 pixels.

Use Graphics Wisely - Use only graphics that enhance content or that lead to a better understanding of the information being presented. Additional graphics that add little to the page result in slower download times.

Show Links Clearly - Use blue underlined text for all unused links when possible. Do not require users to move the mouse to see when the pointer changes to a hand (mine sweeping).

Show Used Links - Indicate to users when a link has been clicked. If a user selects one link, and there are other links to the same target, make sure all links change colors.

2.2 Section 508 Compliance

This portal has been developed to meet the accessibility guidelines set forth in Section 508 of the Federal Rehabilitation Act. Detailed coding standards have been internally created to guide developers as they build the Students portal. These standards assist in the development of a site that is accessible to all users.

The coding standards primarily set forth guidelines for the display of content. For instance, the use of descriptive tags has been incorporated to allow assistive technology to read non-text information, including design staples like graphics and applets. Likewise, for display purposes, all information conveyed in color will be available without color, and the site's pages will be readable without requiring an associated style sheet. Guidelines like these and others seek to improve the accessibility of information for all users, and have been stringently followed by the development team.

Usability testing will be conducted to ensure Section 508 compliance. Changes will be made, if necessary.

2.3 Internationalization

The Students portal will incorporate internationalization. It has been determined that the application is required to support both the English and Spanish languages. As a result the application, on the push of a button, can toggle between either languages.

Part of the design around this functionality is derived from the Struts internationalization architecture. This design is simple by having one single file store text for English and one file for Spanish. The application, based upon the user's locale, determines which file to use. For example, if the users browser locale is 'en' (English) or the user has clicked the English button (thus changing his session locale to 'en') then the application would read from the English file (Resource.properties). In another case if the locale was 'es' (Spanish) the application would read the Spanish file (Resource_es.properties). Note the difference between these two examples. The two bold filenames are the same name except for the ‘<language code>’. The application is ‘intelligent’ enough to know the user’s locale and use the file with the corresponding suffix. Because of the Release 2 content management solution, the Release 1 design has been modified and will only use the Struts internationalization architecture for error-handling. For the second release, every English content page that is hosted by FSA will have a corresponding Spanish content page.

All error messages will be stored in these files. A key is what actually resides in the code and the value is the actual text that will be displayed. Therefore, the key will always stay the same, but the value can change as needed.

2.4 Content Management

Interwoven software will serve as the content management solution for the FSA Portal. Interwoven’s TeamSite product provides a collaborative environment for managing web site content. TeamSite provides preview, version control, web site management, and workflow capabilities. Combined with TeamSite Templating, content contributors are given a structured, safe way to update the content of the web site. Interwoven OpenDeploy and DataDeploy packages will also be implemented to support deployment of files and data to staging and production web site environments.

2.4.1 Integration Architecture

The content management solution will be implemented as a two-stage system. Content Authors and Editors will interact with the TeamSite server via the TeamSite Client GUI. For previewing and QA tasks, there will be a staging environment that is comprised of the same systems present in the production environment. The staging area serves as a test bed in which users may safely try changes to the site without affecting the production environment.

The TeamSite server will operate only on the file system and database of the staging system. A user will preview changes to the site by navigating to the staging web server, either from the TeamSite client or from an ordinary web browser. Changes to production will only occur through a manual deployment from the staging environment to the production servers by a system administrator, which will be automated by OpenDeploy and DataDeploy.

As illustrated below, there are two paths by which content is updated by TeamSite in the staging area. Pages generated by TeamSite from compiling presentation templates and data content records are pushed to the file system of the application server. This path supports changes to the content stored in files. The second path supports changes to content stored in the database. Interwoven provides a unified method of capturing both types of content through Data Capture Templates/Forms, the first type must be pushed to the file system, and the latter type must be pushed to the database.

The content that will be managed through TeamSite for Release 1 of the FSA Students Channel will be minimal. Only updates for the survey and announcements will be handled via this content management system.
